Real Letters to the Editors

Dear Nick Mag,
Does Zelda ever take baths?
Joy J., age 11
Centralia, IL

Dear Joy,
Zelda bathes more often than Queen Isabella of Castile and a little less often than Beau Brummell. Read our hygiene history, "Grime Marches On," on page 43 for the dirty details.

Dear Nick Mag,
Have you ever sat in front of the TV for hours?
Sean M.
Tarrytown, NY

Dear Sean,
Oh, sure. And we also sit under the TV for hours, since there are TV sets bolted to the ceilings in various corners of our office. What's especially weird is when we see or hear the commercial for NICKELODEON MAGAZINE.

Dear Nick Mag,
My mom is looking for a new hairdo. Would you put some really cool hairdos on a page to help her decide?
Heather L., age 10
Laurel, MS

Dear Heather,
We hair you loud and clear.
See page 7 for some ready-to-wear hair.

Whatever We Want

Lucky in Kentucky

Every spring since 1875, the Kentucky Derby horse race has been run at Churchill Downs in Louisville, Kentucky. Can you tell which of the following are thoroughbred facts and which are horsefeathers? Answers on page 56.

- Real
- 1 A down is a treeless expanse of land.
 - 2 All the horses who run the Kentucky Derby are three years old.
 - 3 The race is 1.25 miles long.
 - 4 The "dirt" of the track is actually the Colonel's secret blend of 11 herbs and spices.
 - 5 All the horses who run the Derby wear Panama hats.
 - 6 The Kentucky Derby is also known as The Run for the Roses.
 - 7 A husband and wife (dressed in a two-piece horse costume) won the 1936 Derby in record time.
 - 8 Before becoming an actor, Mister Ed won the Derby.
 - 9 When he was in training, boxer Muhammad Ali often ran around the track at Churchill Downs.
 - 10 The old gray mare, she ain't what she used to be.

Runaway Brain

Hidden somewhere in this issue is the little plastic brain from the see-through body on page two. Don't lose your mind trying to find it. Answer on page 56.

Cloning Around

Clones, clowns, and George Clooney (of ER and Batman & Robin) may seem to have very little in common. But we found some very strong coincidences that connect them.

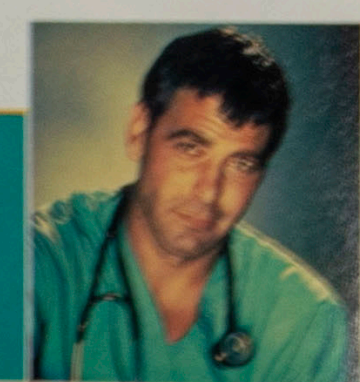

Clones

- big news
- emerge from a test tube
- microscope
- paternity suit
- spittin' image
- two left feet
- double trouble
- DNA

Clowns

- big top
- emerge from a tiny car
- lighttrope
- plaid suit
- squirtin' flower
- two big feet
- dancing doofus
- RB, B&B Circus

Clooney

- big star
- emergency room
- stethoscope
- Batsuit
- fightin' crime
- two big roles
- dashing doctor

Talk to the HAND!

by David Lewman

It seems like everybody has a talk show: Rosie, Sally Jessy, Ricki, Maury. But what if there were a talk show inside your body, hosted by your hand? (Note: You and five or more friends can read this as a skit. The directions that appear in blue italics should not be read aloud.)

Organ music plays in the background. A hand and a heart sit on comfy chairs. The audience applauds.

HANDY Thank you, and welcome to Talk to the Hand! I'm your host, Handy Richter, and our first guest today is the Heart. Heart, I understand you're very sad.

HEART Yes I am, Handy. In fact, I think I'm broken.

HANDY Hmm, you look okay to me. What's the matter?

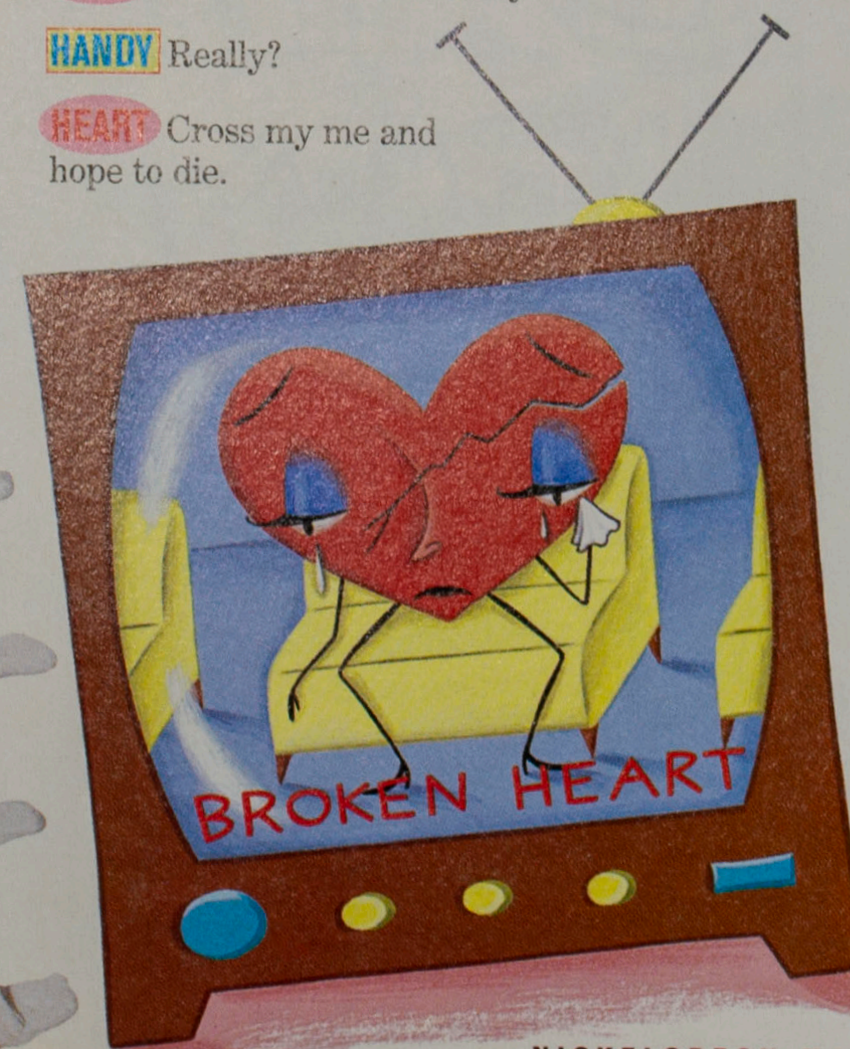

HEART It's the Appendix. He...left. And I miss him so much. (Begins to cry.)

HANDY You mean it?

HEART From the bottom of my me.

HANDY Really?

HEART Cross my me and hope to die.

HANDY Wow, your problem is a real handful. I can't solve it single-handedly, so I've invited three friends of yours to help. Please welcome a fine group of innards: the Brain, the Stomach, and the Liver!

Applause. The three organs enter and sit.

HEART Seeing them just makes me miss Appendix more.

BRAIN Oh, Heart, Appendix was lazy. He never did anything.

HEART That's not true. Just before he left, he almost burst.

BRAIN Almost bursting doesn't count! Come on, Heart! For once in your life, think!

HEART That's your job! Now who's being lazy?

BRAIN You never even saw Appendix!

HEART I'm sure he was beautiful.

STOMACH I saw him, and he wasn't pretty; he looked kind of like a worm.

HEART Worms can be beautiful! Besides, what do you know about love? You're just a stomach!

STOMACH (Growling) Hey, it takes guts to be a stomach!

HEART (Sarcastic) Yeah, right.

STOMACH Listen, valentine...

HEART Don't call me that!

LIVER You know, I'm a liver, not a lover. But

NICKELODEON MAGAZINE MAY 1997

I understand how you can miss someone once they're gone. Heck, every time I secrete bile for storage in the Gallbladder, I...

HANDY Eeeuuuw! Yuck! Let's take a question from the audience.

AUDIENCE MEMBER Heart, I think you need to get over your big red self. (Audience applauds.)

HANDY Ma'am, that's not a question. Do you have a question?

AUDIENCE MEMBER Yes, I do. Heart, why don't you get over your big red self? (More applause.)

HEART It's not myself I need to get over. It's Appendix. Oh, Appendix, why did you have to leave? (Cries.)

BRAIN Heart, remember Tonsils?

HEART Who?

STOMACH You know, that little punching bag up in the throat.

BRAIN No, that's Uvula. Tonsils left. And you were sad then, too, Heart, but you got over it.

HEART Well...that was different. And now I miss Appendix! (Wails.)

HANDY This is getting out of hand.

LIVER I can't stand this anymore! Heart, I...I...love you!

HEART What? You do?

LIVER And I'll always be true to you.

HANDY You mean...?

LIVER I'll never liver...I mean leave her.

HEART Oh, Liver!

LIVER Oh, Heart!

Oh, Liv-A-Snaps!

STOMACH Oh, brother.

HANDY You know what? The hands on the clock tell me we're out of time. See you next time on Talk to the Hand!

Applause. The organs get up to leave.

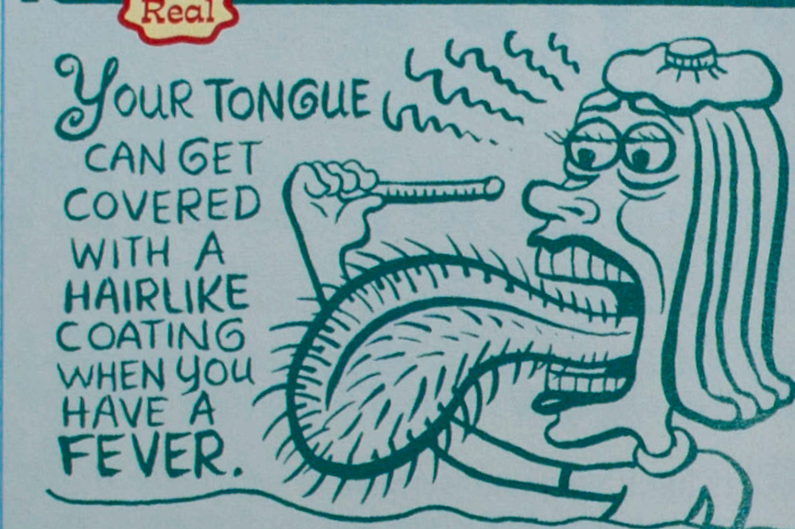

STOMACH Come on, let's get something to eat.

BRAIN Good idea. I wish I'd thought of that.

STOMACH Oh, get over your big gray self. ☐

HOTSHOT SHORTSTOP DEREK

OPEN →

Real This is New York Yankee Derek Jeter's right arm shown actual size. Place your arm next to his, and see how you measure up.

Derek Jeter became a professional baseball player when he was just 17. He played with the New York Yankees' minor league teams until becoming the Yankees' starting shortstop in 1996. Last fall, 22-year-old Derek won the American League Rookie of the Year Award and helped the Yankees win the World Series. He recently stopped short to answer our questions.

Nickelodeon Magazine:
How old were you when you got your first mitt?
Derek Jeter: I think I was four or five.

And when did you hit your first homer?
I'm not sure. Maybe I was six or seven, and it was probably off a tee. We didn't have fences to hit over then—we just kept running until we were at home plate.

How did you become a shortstop?

My dad had been a shortstop when he was in college, and, you know, when you're a kid, you want to be just like your dad.

How long have you been a Yankees fan?
For as long as I can remember. The first pro game I went to was a Yankees game—I went with my grandmother.

Derek Jeter: I think I was four or five.

And when did you hit your first homer?
I'm not sure. Maybe I was six or seven, and it was probably off a tee. We didn't have fences to hit over then—we just kept running until we were at home plate.

How did you become a shortstop?
My dad had been a shortstop when he was in college, and, you know, when you're a kid, you want to be just like your dad.

How long have you been a Yankees fan?
For as long as I can remember. The first pro game I went to was a Yankees game—I went with my grandmother.

Were your parents Yankees fans, too?
My mom has always been a Yankees fan, and my dad used to like the Detroit Tigers. And now, well, they don't really have a choice.

What was the first thing you bought after you were signed?
I bought myself a Mitsubishi 3000 GT [sports car], and I bought my parents a van, so they could travel to watch me play. They live in Kalamazoo, Michigan, and they come see me play in Detroit, Chicago, and New York.

What's the coolest thing about being a Yankee?
It's cool just being a part of the Yankee tradition and being on one of the most recognized teams in all of sports.

What Yankee were you most excited to play with?
In 1995, I was called up from the minors to play a few games, and I got to play with Don Mattingly.

What American League player were you most excited to play against?
Cal Ripken.

Why?
Because he's Cal Ripken. [Ripken, of the Baltimore Orioles, has played in more consecutive ballgames than any other player.]

Are there snacks in the dugout to eat during games?
No, we're not supposed to

Did you get sick of the Macarena being done at games last summer?

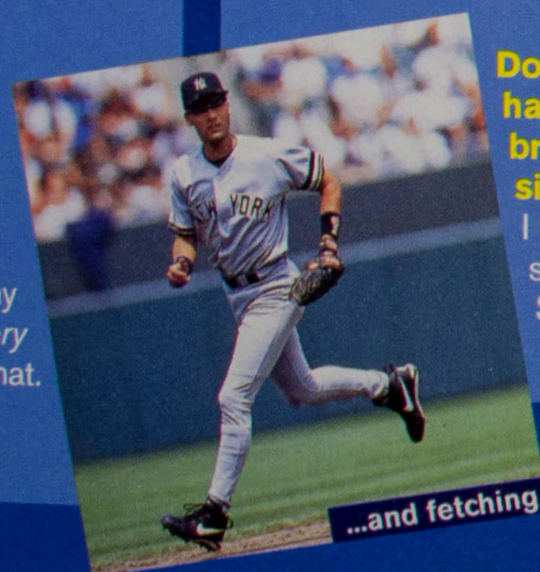

No. During home games, the Yankees' ground crew usually comes out and does the Y.M.C.A. dance on the field between two innings. At three games last summer, instead of the Y.M.C.A., they did the Macarena, and each time we lost. Mr. Steinbrenner [the owner of the Yankees] asked them to stop doing it.

The Why You Do the Things You Do

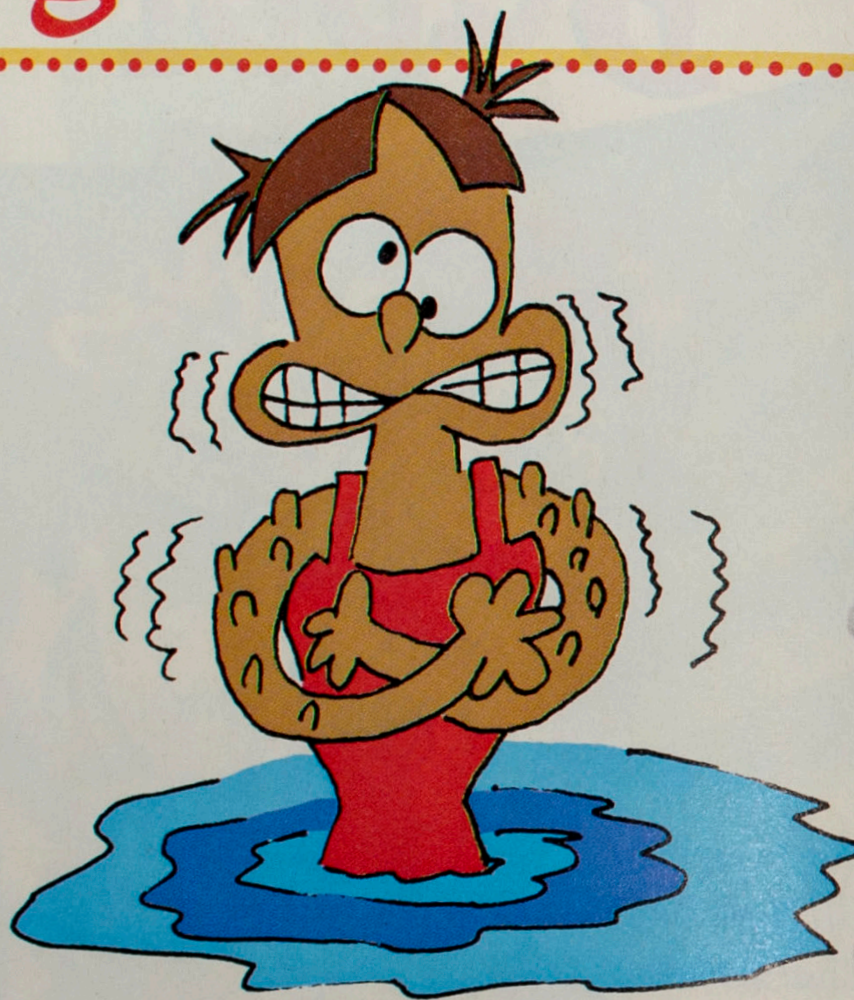

Real

by Jennifer Braunschweiger

GOOSE BUMPS

Impress your friends by calling them: The pilo motor reflex

What's going on: The root of each little hair on your arm is surrounded by a tiny muscle. When you're cold, these tiny muscles tighten in an effort to hold in your body heat. Each tightened muscle also makes a little bump and causes the hair to stand on end.

HICCUPING

Impress your friends by calling it: Singultus

What's going on: The diaphragm is the muscle beneath your rib cage that controls the movement of your lungs. Sometimes, for many different reasons, this muscle becomes irritated and your breathing process gets out of whack. Your diaphragm still makes your lungs inhale and exhale, but the opening of your windpipe—the epiglottis—is not coordinated with your breathing. The hic! noise is the epiglottis snapping shut after the air rushes into your lungs.

BURPING

Impress your friends by calling it: Eructation

What's going on: When you eat and talk, you swallow air, and it ends up in your stomach. Also, gas is produced as your stomach digests food. When too much air or gas builds up, your stomach sends some back up and out your mouth.

PINS AND NEEDLES

Impress your friends by calling it: Paresthesia

What's going on: When you've been sitting on your foot for a while, you may feel some numbness, because your nerves are compressed. After you've stomped your foot on the ground, your nerves straighten, or "wake up," and start resending messages to your brain. At first, these messages are distorted and are perceived by your brain as that pins-and-needles feeling. (It's like when a TV doesn't receive the right signals and it shows static.)

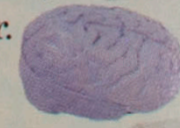

We'll always have Paresthesia.

EARWAX

Impress your friends by calling it: Cerumen

What's going on: Your ears sweat. But they don't make the watery sweat that the rest of your body does—they make cerumen, that yellowish-brown powder or goo. The cerumen traps foreign objects, such as dirt and soot, protecting your sensitive inner ear.

CLASSIC COMIC

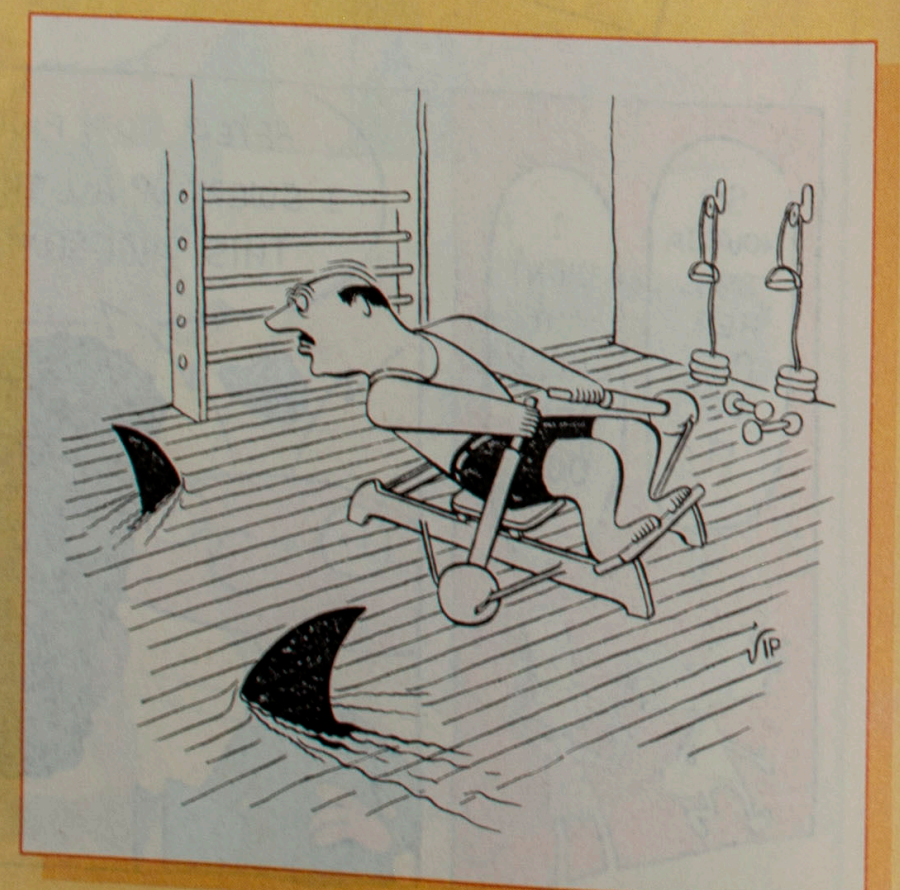

These four cartoons are by Virgil Partch, who was known as Vip because of the way he signed his name. In the early 1940s, Vip worked for Walt Disney and then for Walter Lantz, Woody Woodpecker's creator. Vip didn't think his own drawings were very good, but a friend secretly sent a pile of Vip's cartoons to Collier's magazine, which published one of them. Vip became a famous cartoonist, and his comics appeared in hundreds of newspapers.

"All right! All right! I'll buy another hammock!"

Life in the Fast LaLanne

by Andrew Santella

Real

Jack LaLanne opened the first modern health club in the United States in 1936 and later had a popular exercise show on TV. He has also accomplished many physical feats: He swam underwater across the San Francisco Bay while towing a 1,000-pound boat. He did 1,033 push-ups in 23 minutes. He water-skied 52 miles. Today, Jack is 82 years old and still going strong. Very strong.

Nickelodeon Magazine: What time do you wake up in the morning?

Jack LaLanne: Four-thirty. Then I work out for two hours, from five to seven. I have two gyms in my house—one with a lot of the equipment that I invented way back in the 1930s and 1940s. The other one has all the modern chrome stuff.

Have you ever tried any extreme sports, such as bungee jumping?

No, I never have.

Some of the stunts you've done are pretty extreme, though. Why did you do them?

I did them to call attention to the importance of exercise. I had to set an example. People would see me and say, "If a guy that age can do that, then I'm going to start working out, too."

What's the hardest stunt you've done?

The toughest stunt I ever did was 1,000 chin-ups and 1,000 push-ups in an hour and 22 minutes. I had blisters underneath my calluses. And towing those 70 boats on my 70th birthday [photo, above]—that was a tough one. I was handcuffed and shackled, with 70 people on board. One year, I water-skied 52 miles, being pulled behind a helicopter [from San Francisco] to the Farallon Islands and back.

Are you planning anything else?

I'd like to swim underwater from Santa Catalina Island to Los Angeles [with an air tank].

Is the jumping jack named after you?

I can't be sure. But the press did call me "Jumping Jack" because during the 1950s I opened my television show by doing them. Jumping jacks work almost every muscle in your body. And they're fun.

How many years was your show on TV?

I was on 34 years. I was on by myself, or sometimes my wife joined me, and I also had two dogs. Their names were Happy and Walter, which stood for We All Love To Exercise Regularly.

What did the dogs do?

Happy would carry a joke book to me in his mouth, and then I'd read a joke from it. If it was a lousy joke, I'd say it was his fault.

Were you ever a weakling?

Yes. Up to the time I was 14 years old, I was 30 pounds underweight. I ate junk food. I had failing grades in school. Then I started exercising.

What are your favorite sports?

Swimming, football, track, boxing—the whole bit.

Do you ever take a day off from exercising?

Never! It's survival.

IF TOOTH BE TOLD

Your teeth are stronger than your bones. In fact, they're coated with enamel, which is the hardest substance your body produces. But despite their tough coating, teeth will still rot if they're not properly taken care of. STACEY BOWERS brushed up on how people have cared for their teeth throughout history. Real

Shave and a Haircut, Two Bites

In the 1300s, European barbers not only cut hair and trimmed beards, but also pulled rotten teeth. And long before the first porcelain dentures were used in France in 1774, false teeth were being made from bone or ivory or even from the teeth of animals or dead people. In the 1500s, wealthy European women had their gums pierced with hooks to hold their dentures.

Now it's the dentist—but centuries ago it might have been the barber.

First Mate: Chewsticca

Don't bristle at the thought of hog hair toothbrushes.

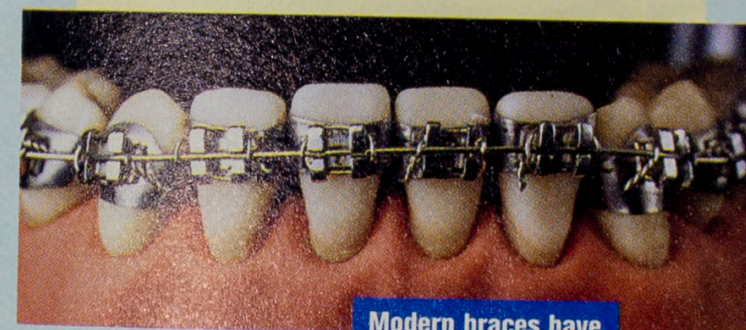

The first toothbrushes were chew sticks and have been found in Egyptian tombs dating back to 3000 BC. They were pencil-size twigs with one end frayed until it was soft. Chew sticks were rubbed against the teeth without toothpaste. These sticks are still used in some places, and they can be just as effective as modern toothbrushes. Some African tribespeople fray twigs from a certain kind of tree that they call the toothbrush tree.

Modern, minty toothpaste took some time to gel.

Wire You Smiling?

The ancient Egyptians replaced lost teeth, decorated their teeth, and used devices to space their teeth. The Egyptians also used wires to move teeth together. Much later, in the 1600s, people tried moving teeth by binding them together with strips of animal gut. A hundred years later, some dentists tried straightening teeth by hand, using forceps. In the 1830s, individually crafted devices much like today's braces came into use, and at the end of the century, they were mass-produced. Retainers were introduced in 1908, giving kids everywhere something to "accidentally" toss into cafeteria trash cans.

Modern braces have roots in the gums of ancient Egyptians.

Your teeth are stronger than your bones. In fact, they're coated with enamel, which is the hardest substance your body produces. But despite their tough coating, teeth will still rot if they're not properly taken care of. STACEY BOWERS brushed up on how people have cared for their teeth throughout history. Real

Shave and a Haircut, Two Bites

In the 1300s, European barbers not only cut hair and trimmed beards, but also pulled rotten teeth. And long before the first porcelain dentures were used in France in 1774, false teeth were being made from bone or ivory or even from the teeth of animals or dead people. In the 1500s, wealthy European women had their gums pierced with hooks to hold their dentures.

Now it's the dentist—but centuries ago it might have been the barber.

Don't bristle at the thought of hog hair toothbrushes.

The first bristles made in China were wiry hairs from the neck of hogs. These pieces of bamboo remained a common toothbrush until 1930.

"P" is for Paste

The first known toothpaste was used in Egypt around the year 2000 BC. It was made from powdered pumice stone and strong wine vinegar, and brushed on with a chew stick. Early Roman (and some Native American) toothpaste and mouthwash were made from human urine. Urine was used as toothpaste because it was said to whiten teeth and strengthen their roots. Upper-class Roman women paid a lot for Portuguese urine, which was said to be the strongest in Europe (probably because it took so long to be delivered). Urine was a common toothpaste ingredient until the 1700s—other common ingredients included crushed eggshells, soot, honey, charcoal, nuts, and ground fish bones. ☐

Real Grime Marches On

Here's some of the dirt on how people have stayed clean throughout the ages.

c. 1700 BC: The oldest known bathtub is made in Crete.

c. AD 300: In the Roman Empire, public baths (left), like today's health clubs, become social hot spots. Wealthy Romans bathe for hours, each using nearly 300 gallons of water in a day.

c. 600: The Islamic prophet Muhammad recommends that people take baths. Bathing for spiritual cleansing, as well as for health, becomes popular. Hamams, or public baths, are built in many Middle Eastern countries.

Early Middle Ages (c. 400–750): The early Christian Church discourages bathing throughout Europe, possibly because the ancient Romans, whom the Church associated with decadence, had given bathing a bad name.

The Crusades (c. 1000–1300): European Crusaders returning home from the Middle East revive bathing. They had grown accustomed to luxurious Turkish baths and hamams. These baths, like the Roman baths, get a bad reputation and are banned.

Late 1400s: Queen Isabella of Castile (left) boasts that she has only bathed twice in her life—once at birth and once before her wedding. Baths were for commoners, not queens.

c. 1600–1850: Considered a luxury, soap is heavily taxed in England. People pour on perfume to hide their stench, and the combination creates a stinky problem. Parliament even considers outlawing the use of perfume in 1770.

1700s: Pennsylvania and Virginia laws ban bathing because it encourages nudity.

1790s: George Bryan "Beau" Brummell, an English trendsetter, makes bathing hip again. Brummell, who bathes in milk, spends hours a day primping in the bathroom.

1840s: English statesman Edwin Chadwick declares war on grime. Though he recommends washing for health, baths are still hard to come by.

c. 1900: Make room for the bathroom. Bathing and washing become more common as affordable indoor plumbing flows into many homes.

1920s: In America, the "Cleanliness Crusade" promotes bathing with clean-themed cartoons and soapy songs, such as "Clean hands and hearts may hope/To find the way to happiness/By using lots of soap."

Today: Americans really clean up—the U.S. has more bathtubs per person than any other nation.

*c. stands for circa, which means "around the time of."

I thought it stood for canine.

Leadership Conference Education Fund

I This Place!

BY ANDREW SANTELLA

Real

Arm

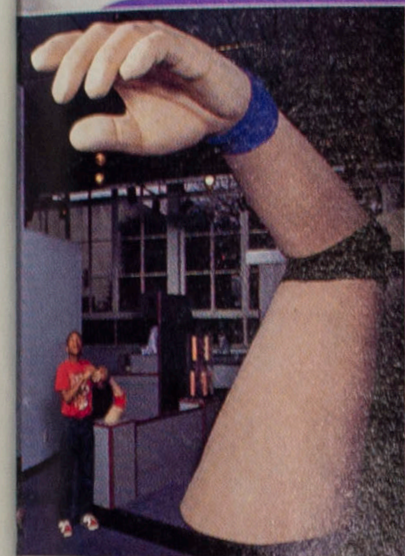

Where to find it: The Science Place, in Dallas, Texas

Does admission cost an arm and a leg? No, just $3.

Size: Thirteen-and-a-half-feet long (about five times the length of an average adult arm)

What it does: It moves. A model of an actual-size arm is in front of the giant arm. When you move the little arm, the big one moves along with it. It will flex, wave, and lift a finger.

Added bonus: It's ticklish.

Foot

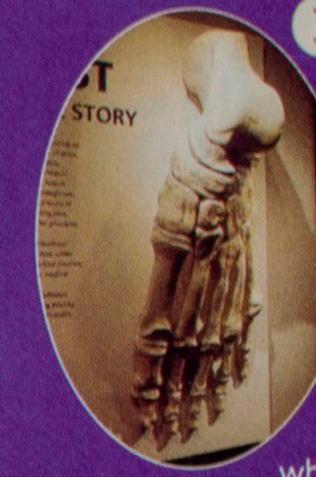

Where to find it: Feet First, the Dr. William M. Scholl College of Podiatric Medicine, in Chicago, Illinois

Will you be able to foot the bill? Yes, it's free.

Size: Four-feet long (about four times the size of the average man's foot)

What it does: Shows that your foot is actually made up of 28 different bones, which let you stand, walk, and run.

Added bonuses: Nearby, you can make an impression of your own footprint, which is just as unique as your fingerprints. Also on display is a size 35 shoe worn by Robert P. Wadlow, who was 8'11" and is listed as the tallest man in The Guinness Book of Records.

Heart

Where to find it: Heartland, the California Museum of the Heart, in Rancho Mirage

Does it cost a bloody fortune to get in? No, just 50 cents.

Size: Ten feet from the base of the aorta to the top of the great arteries (about 20 times the size of an average human heart)

What it does: Pulsates, beats, and beeps. You can record the sound of your own beating heart.

Scary added bonus: The big heart has a simulated heart attack.

Teeth

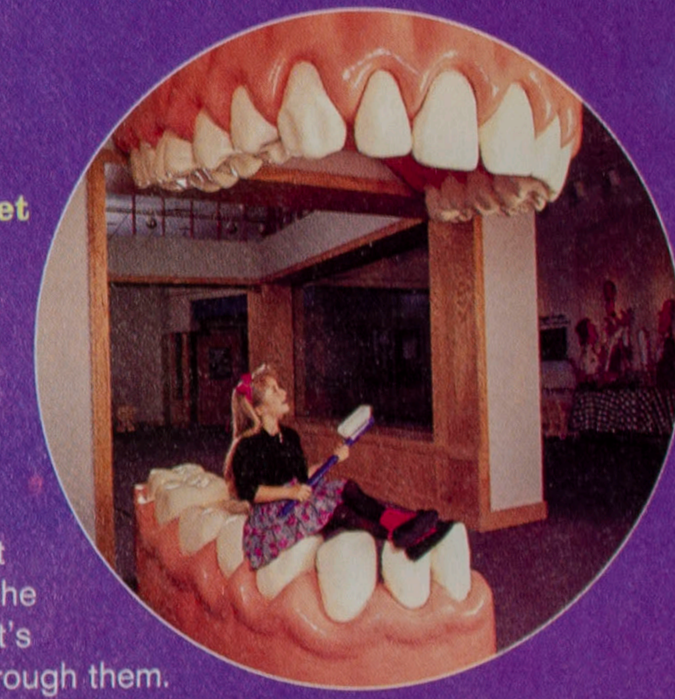

Where to find the set of teeth: The Health Adventure, in Asheville, North Carolina

Will your jaw drop when you see the cost of admission? No, it's just $2.

Size: The set is 10-feet high (about 100 times the size of an average adult's teeth). You can walk through them.

What it does: Teaches you proper brushing technique. You can even practice with a big toothbrush.

Added bonus: You can floss with a pair of pantyhose (provided).

The Whole Bod

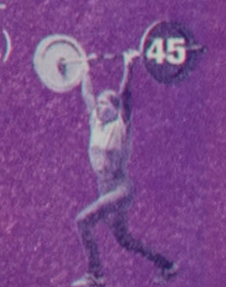

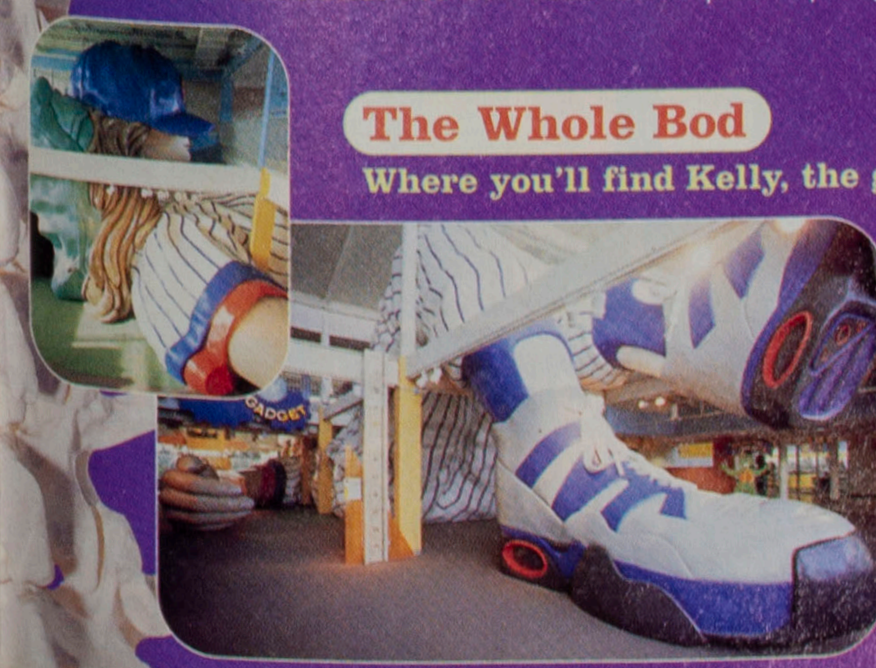

Where you'll find Kelly, the giant girl: JFK Health World, in Barrington, Illinois

How much will she set you back? A whole $5.

Size: Eighty-five-feet long (about 20 times the height of an average seven-year-old girl)

What she does: You can crawl through her heart and remove some bandages to find out about her body's inner workings. (Even though she has bandages, she's not injured.)

Added bonus: Inside Kelly's backpack, there is a "Brain Theater," which shows a movie about how she thinks.

The Last World He's Created a Monster!

Real

STAN WINSTON headed up the design and construction of the animatronic dinosaurs in The Last World and Jurassic Park. Stan (left) also designed creatures for Batman Returns, Aliens, and Edward Scissorhands, and effects for Terminator 2: Judgment Day.

Nickelodeon Magazine: Which of your creatures is your favorite?

Stan Winston: That's probably the hardest question you could ask. I don't have a favorite. Dinosaurs, aliens, the Terminator, Edward Scissorhands—they all have a real special place for me.

What's the scariest creature that you've created?

Tyrannosaurus rex was the scariest—not just in the film but in the filming, too. If something had gone wrong on the set, it could have killed somebody. It weighed close to nine tons.

Since there are no pictures of real dinosaurs, how did you know when your designs were accurate?

There's a certain amount of leeway because no one knows exactly what dinosaurs looked like. But you can add a creative mind to what is known about science, what's known about anatomy, and what's known about animals today. You look at a dinosaur design and you say, "It's right because it looks right, it feels real, it makes sense."

How much did you study dinosaurs before you could start designing?

Well, I've been a fan of dinosaurs since I was a little kid. And we did an enormous amount of research for both Jurassic Park and The Last World. We wanted the dinosaurs to be the most accurate dinosaurs ever created—not just on film but in museums as well.

Will these dinosaurs end up in museums?

No. Unfortunately, the materials that make the skin look real are made of foam rubber, and they don't last long. They rot.

If you could be any of your characters, which one would you be?

If I were going to be a dinosaur, I'd be a T-rex. There has to be security in being a T-rex. But that doesn't mean I'm someone who likes to hurt and kill people. There's a warm, fuzzy side of me, too.

An alien or a T-rex, which one is more evil?

A T-rex is not evil. He's an animal, a carnivore. He kills to survive and eat. And the queen alien [in Aliens] was just trying to take care of all of her worker aliens. That wasn't about evil. Evil is a character like Freddy Krueger.

Is there any creature that you wish you had created?

Yes. E.T. I had always wanted to work with Steven Spielberg—I'm his hugest fan. I've always regretted that I didn't design E.T.

Do you have similar feelings about Godzilla?

No.

Do you have pets?

I have three dogs, and sometimes four if I'm taking care of my son's dog. I've had dogs all my life. When I went off to college, and I didn't have a dog, I had to go to the pound so that I could get one. There is no Stan Winston without a dog.

Do you dress up for Halloween?

I don't. But I used to. It was my favorite holiday.

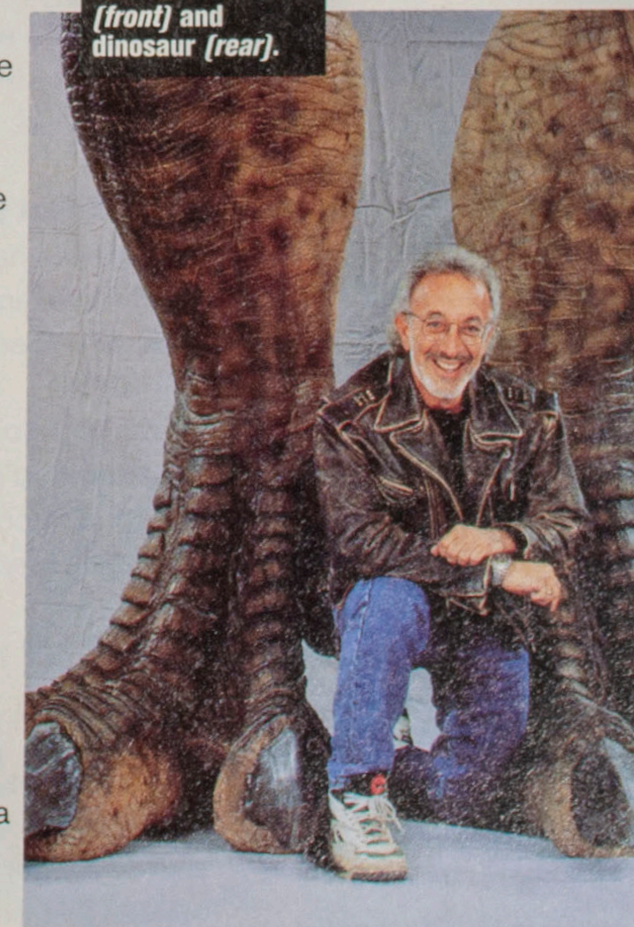

Did your costume ever weigh nine tons?

No. I never went as anything extreme. And it's not my favorite holiday anymore because, just by virtue of what I do, I'm the first person everyone asks "Will you help me with my costume?" So I have to hibernate, because if you can't help everyone, you can't help anyone.

What were you like as a kid?

Everything I'm doing today, I did as a kid. I loved doing puppet shows, and I'm still doing those today—because Jurassic Park and The Last World are like big puppet shows. I loved magic and doing tricks no one could figure out. Now, I make big toys that are puppets. They're magic. It's all the same thing.

No mean feat, those two mean feet: Stan Winston (front) and dinosaur (rear).

Guess Who's Coming to Dino?

Starasaurus Jeff

Real

This month, JEFF GOLDBLUM will return to his role as Ian Malcolm in The Lost World. Last summer, he costarred with Will Smith and some aliens in Independence Day. We recently jur-asked him a few questions.

Nickelodeon Magazine: What kind of a kid were you?
Jeff Goldblum: Besides getting good grades on my report card, my fourth grade teacher, Mrs. Veblun, wrote "He's a joy!"

What is your favorite movie?

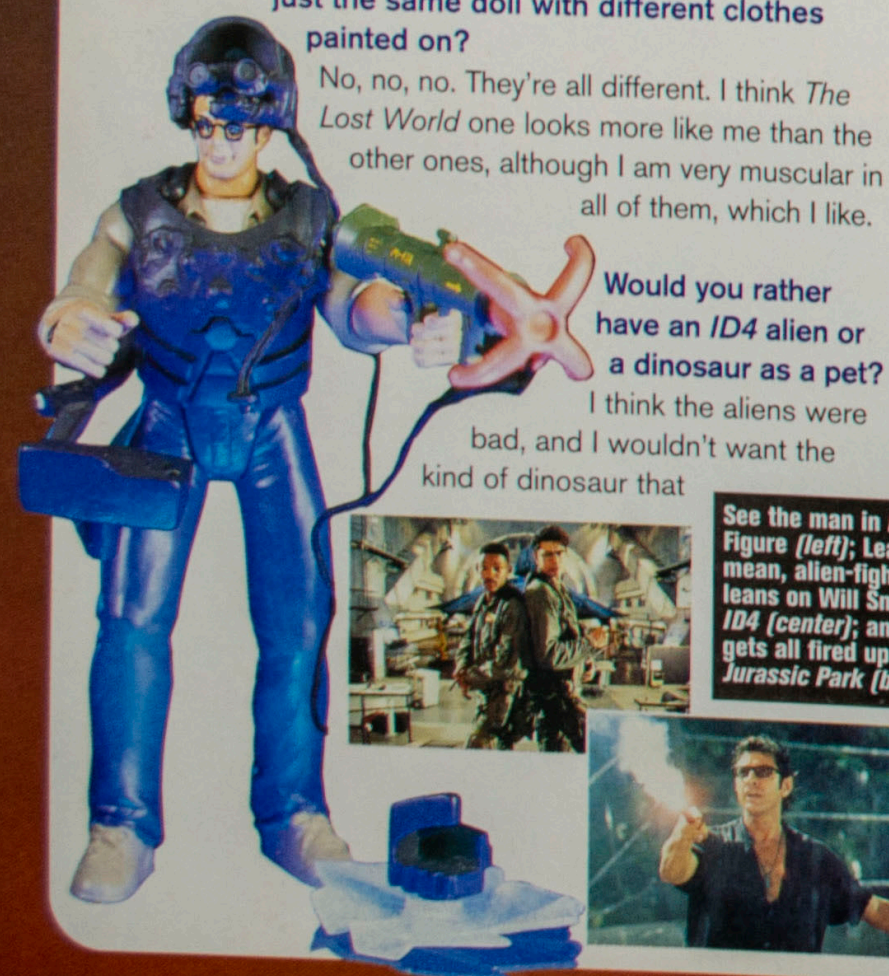

The Lost World. It really is. I certainly had a great time making the movie, and I had a part that I really liked. Steven Spielberg is a great director.

Was a mold made of you to make any of your action figures?

No. My face has been molded for all sorts of movie things, but for the action figures, they took some quick photographs and made the action figures from those.

There's an action figure of you from Jurassic Park, one from ID4 (below), and another from The Lost World. Is it just the same doll with different clothes painted on?

No, no, no. They're all different. I think The Lost World one looks more like me than the other ones, although I am very muscular in all of them, which I like.

Would you rather have an ID4 alien or a dinosaur as a pet?
I think the aliens were bad, and I wouldn't want the kind of dinosaur that would eat me. But there are the great big brachiosaurs and the triceratops, which are like big cows. I'd like to have one of those.

Would you want to keep the alien around to do household chores?

Yes, I'd make him do all the difficult tasks. Bad aliens.

Vanessa Lee Chester says that you guys were always goofing off on the set of The Lost World. Were you?

True enough. I am known to be silly, and Vince Vaughn [who plays Nick Van Owen] is the silliest adult I've ever seen. One time, we went to a restaurant and all the waiters put on big hats and started dancing. They put a hat on me, and I got on a conga line and danced around. I had my picture taken, and I looked pretty goofy. Vince got his hands on the picture, and later, when we were eating at a fancy hotel, he went to all the other tables and showed it to everyone. He made me laugh until my sides ached.

What was the best part about filming in Hawaii?

The water slide we had at our hotel. I'd never been on a water slide before, and I went on this one and it was fabulous. It must have been about seven stories high.

Could you go on the slide any time you wanted because you're a big movie star?

No. I don't accept special treatment. I'm just the same as everybody else, just much taller.

How tall are you?

Six foot four.

That's 42 feet in dog years.

Can you do any tricks with your body?

I can wiggle one ear at a time: left and then right, left and then right. And I can roll my belly like a belly dancer. I've been able to do it since I was a kid.

Jurassa Lee Chester

Twelve-year-old VANESSA LEE CHESTER has acted in The Little Princess and Harriet the Spy. Now she's off to The Lost World as Kelly. We had a raptor-vating conversation with Vanessa.

Nickelodeon Magazine: What's your character, Kelly, like?

Vanessa Lee Chester: She's just one of the kids. She's a lot like me. We're both kind of funky.

Did you travel for the movie?

We went to Hawaii. We also filmed on the Universal Studios lot in Hollywood.

Was the Universal lot fun?

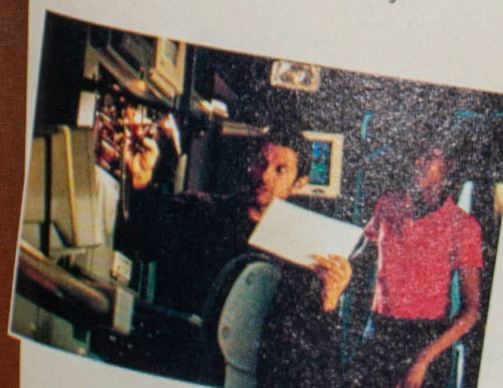

Yes. On lunch breaks, I'd ride my bicycle over to stage 35, where they had free Sega games. I was in heaven.

Did you have a favorite scene?

All the dangerous, scary ones where we were chased by dinosaurs.

Was the Tyrannosaurus rex model as big as a real T-rex?

Yes. You can see a T-rex in books and think it's cool, but when you actually see how big it is, it's scary.

Vanessa Lee Chester computes with Jeff Goldblum (above); and consults with other Lost World visitors (right).

What scary stuff did the dinosaur models do?

The eyes could actually move. And some robots could even bleed.

What would you do if you saw a real T-rex?

I would look at it for a minute, then run the other way, because I'd want to live to tell my story.

Did the cast goof around?

Oh yeah. Once, Vince Vaughn put my hand into a dinosaur model that had intestines hanging out. It was so disgusting.

So you didn't feel like the only kid?

I felt like the only adult on the film. Everyone was always playing around, throwing grapes at each other.

How would Janie Gibbs from Harriet the Spy deal with dinosaurs?

That's where her science would stop. She'd just say, "Wow, dinosaurs."

Which role was more fun, Janie or Kelly?

It's hard to compare. In Harriet, I loved my wardrobe. I had some funky outfits. In The Lost World, I had one costume. By the last day, I was really sick of it.

Which dinosaur would you like to be?

Probably a raptor. They're sly and swift. They hunt in packs, and I'm always with my little clique.

But you wouldn't hunt other kids, would you?

No, that's where the line is drawn. □

Let It BEAVERS

Real

The newest Nicktoon is The Angry Beavers, featuring Daggett and Norbert, beaver brothers trying to make it in the big world—or at least in the forest. We found out how an episode is made.

1 Getting Ready

Before work on a cartoon series can start, the creators need to agree on what the main characters will look like. The pictures below show early versions of Daggett and Norbert and how they ended up. Among other changes, Norbert was given more hair so that it would be easier to tell the brothers apart.

2 All Aboard

A script must be written before production of an episode begins. It tells the story through dialogue and action descriptions. Then, using the script, artists create a storyboard (above), which looks like a comic book. The storyboard is the first visual guide for an episode, showing the characters' facial expressions and physical action.

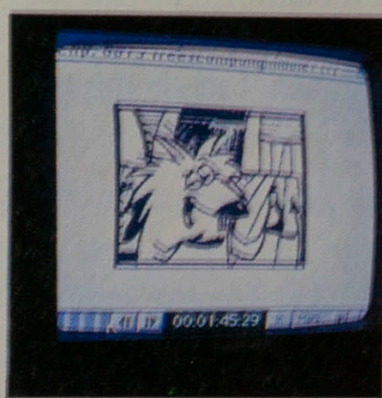

3 For the Record

The actors perform the dialogue in a recording booth. Of the 300 people who auditioned, Richard Horowitz and Nick Bakay were chosen as the perfect voices for Daggett and Norbert. "No one could play the characters the way they did," says creator Mitch Schauer. "They're just like Daggett and Norbert."

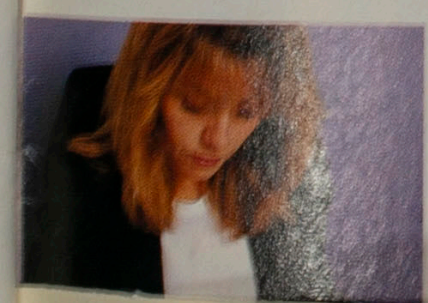

4 Black-and-White Beavers

The director figures out how long the action will take. Then the storyboards are filmed and the recorded lines are added to simulate the final cartoon. The result, called an animatic (right), is sort of a black-and-white comic book in motion. It has no color, music, or sound effects, but it shows how the dialogue and story will fit into a 22-minute episode.

All the scenery is then finished without any characters. Later, Daggett and Norbert in action will be added on top of the backgrounds. That way, animators don't have to draw the same scenery again and again.

6 At Last, the Animating!

After these steps, which take several months, the storyboards, animatic, and backgrounds are sent to animators in Korea, who produce 26,000 cels. Cels are color drawings on clear plastic sheets. The cels are placed over a background and filmed one after another, which creates the illusion of motion. The whole animation process requires 250 people and takes about three months.

Do you know a Daggett from a Norbert? Here's a guide:

Daggett

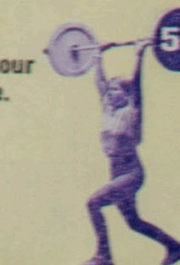

PERSONALITY: An overreager beaver with a short attention span; can't stand Norbert's mellowness.
FUR: Brown
NOSE: Red
HEIGHT: Shorter than Norbert
HAIR FACTOR: Slicked back and black
STUFF HE WOULD DO: Convince himself he's a superhero; annoy other animals; watch weird old movies.
STUFF HE SAYS: "This is nuts!" "Easy peasy!"

Norbert

PERSONALITY: Laid back; talented; likes to tease his brother.
FUR: Tan
NOSE: Lavender
HEIGHT: Taller than Daggett by a quarter inch, which annoys Daggett
HAIR FACTOR: Spiky
STUFF HE WOULD DO: Tease Daggett; calm Daggett down; tease Daggett again; watch weird old movies.
STUFF HE SAYS: "Bro" "Wolaboga!"

The Angry Beavers airs on Sundays at 11:30 AM, one hour earlier in the central time zone. Showtime subject to change.

The Angry Beavers creator

Cartoonist Mitch Schauer (left) has worked on shows featuring characters such as Freakazoid and Scooby Doo. We spoke to him about his latest creation, The Angry Beavers.

Nickelodeon Magazine: How did you come up with the characters' names?

Mitch Schauer: I found them in the book 35,000 Plus Baby Names, [which said that] in Scandinavian Norbert means "brilliant hero" and Daggett means "bright." Although Daggett, the character, is the opposite of that.

Hey, Herb!

¡Hola, readers!

Where you ask the president of Nickelodeon, Herb Scannell, anything you want.

What is the most embarrassing thing that's ever happened to you at work?

One day, when I was working at another company, I bent down to pick something up and my pants ripped, just as my new boss was on his way to see me! Luckily one of my coworkers offered to sew them for me. In the meantime, I sat at my desk in my underwear. Fortunately, my boss didn't get to my office until right after I put the mended pants on.

Do you speak any languages other than English?

I learned a little Spanish from my mom, who grew up in Puerto Rico. As a kid, I always knew I was in big trouble when my mom yelled "Guillermo Heriberto," which is my full name in Spanish.

Goof Troupe

In our March issue we mistakenly called immature's Batman "Batan" (page 57). How childish of us. Also, the names of the celebrities on our April cover are: Whitney Houston, Rugrats, Tom Cruise, Jonathan Taylor Thomas, Kristi Yamaguchi, Shaquille O'Neal, Pampy, and Rosie O'Donnell. Ann B. Davis did not appear as Alice.
